Once upon a time, in a faraway land, there lived a beautiful maiden named Marishka. She had a heart as kind as the summer sun and a spirit as gentle as the spring breeze. But Marishka's life was not an easy one. Her stepmother was a cruel and wicked woman who treated Marishka with contempt.

Every day, Marishka was forced to do the most arduous tasks around the house. She had to clean the stables, feed the animals, wash the clothes, and cook the meals. Even though she toiled from dawn till dusk, her stepmother was never satisfied. She would often beat Marishka and call her names.

One cold winter day, as Marishka was walking through the forest, she came across a group of twelve men. They were dressed in white robes and had long, flowing beards. They were the twelve months of the year.

"Good day, fair maiden," said the eldest of the months. "What troubles you?"

Marishka told the months about her cruel stepmother and her hard life. The months listened with compassion.

"We will help you, Marishka," said the eldest month. "We will give you a box of seduction. This box contains a magical charm that will make anyone who opens it fall in love with you."

Marishka thanked the months and took the box. She hurried home and hid it under her bed.

The next day, Marishka's stepmother ordered her to go to the village and buy some bread. Marishka took the box with her and when she reached the village, she opened it.

As soon as the box was opened, a beautiful fragrance filled the air. Everyone in the village stopped what they were doing and stared at Marishka. They had never seen such a beautiful woman before.

The village baker, a handsome young man named Janko, was so smitten with Marishka that he immediately asked for her hand in marriage. Marishka gladly accepted.

Marishka and Janko were married in a beautiful ceremony. They lived happily ever after in a small cottage in the forest.

But Marishka never forgot the kindness of the twelve months. Every year, she would leave a gift of food and drink for them in the forest.
